

Departmental Colloquium - History Department - Winter Semester 2024-25

Multi-scalar Histories of Gender and Decolonisation in South Asia

Rosalind Parr
(Glasgow Caledonian University)

In this colloquium, Rosalind Parr explores how a multi-scalar analysis can enrich our understanding of gender and decolonisation in South Asia. The focus will be on the role of South Asian women's organisations in postcolonial family planning projects - interventions that were at once associated with nation-building, international politics and the intimate realms of the body. It will be argued that, by considering the intersection of different sites and spatial levels, a multi-scalar analysis offers a model for thinking through the constraints of decolonisation and the question of gender in global perspective.

More information

Wednesday 15.01.2025
SAI Room 130.00.03
16:15 CET

Image: Abadia Wadia (right) with India's first prime minister Jawaharlal Nehru - FPAI